Committee Faculty Senate Executive Committee

Notes

The following course proposals, if approved, will move forward to the Faculty Senate meeting on April 9 for final approval. They will then be moved forward to the implementation stage.

The March 5 Faculty Senate meeting was the deadline for Fall 2019 changes.

AGEC - 560 - Data Analytics for Agricultural Economics

2018-2019 Appendix A: Course Form - New

General Catalog Information (NEW)

Contact person for this proposal* Christine Wilson

Department* Agricultural Economics

Subject* AGEC

Catalog Number* 560

Long Course Title* Data Analytics for Agricultural Economics

Short Title* Data Analytics for AGEC

Credit Hours/ Units* 3

Course Description* Advanced collection and applied analysis of agricultural business and economics data for decision making. Applied communication of results and implications.

Need help? See Course Description Guidelines

Rationale and Impact (NEW)

Rationale* Data analysis and communication for decision making are critical to agricultural business success. Advanced skills in these areas are valuable for students and sought by employers. This course will provide students training to develop additional agricultural data analysis and decision-making skills.

Impact Statement
(i.e. if this impacts
another unit)

No negative impact to other programs. The College of Business has a Data Analytics Certificate. The Department of Management and the Department of Marketing in the College of Business will be contacted to make them aware of our course proposal.

Subject*

Catalog Number* 101

Long Course Title* Concepts of Biology

Short Title* Concepts of Biology

Credit Hours/ Units* 4

Course Description* Fundamental concepts in evolutionary biology, ecology, cell biology, genetics, biodiversity, and the scientific method. The role of biology in society and the development of skills aimed at differentiation of biological fact from fiction are emphasized and explored.

Need help? See Course Description Guidelines

Rationale and Impact (NEW)

Rationale* The first reason why this course is being proposed is to have a course that is equivalent to the non-majors introductory biology courses being offered at other institutions. Currently, non-science major biology courses are being transferred in as equivalent to Principles of Biology (BIOL 198), in an equivalency determined by the Kansas Board of Regents. This has caused issues with science majors transferring in non-science majors biology classes, and those students not being prepared for upper level biology classes. Second, we are facing a decline in enrollment in biology classes, which may be exacerbated by students taking non-major biology classes at different institutions because of the perception that the courses will be easier than BIOL 198. We can offer BIOL 101 as an alternative to the students attending different institutions as a means to increase enrollment at K-State. As a possible side effect, if non-science majors take BIOL 101 instead of BIOL 198, then BIOL 198 will serve primarily science majors, and could be potentially be adapted accordingly.

Impact Statement (i.e. if this impacts another unit)* Contacted Assistant Dean of Students, Alison Wheatley, on September 13 via email. Dr. Wheatley supports the development of BIOL 101.

Since this introduction of the new course does not affect the delivery of existing courses, no direct impact on other departments' offerings or programs are anticipated.

Projected Term*

2202 Spring 2020

FDSCI - 510 - Fruit and Vegetable Processing

2018-2019 Appendix A: Course Form - New

General Catalog Information (NEW)

Contact person for this proposal* David A. Nichols, dnichols@ksu.edu, 532-1239

Department* Food Science and Industry

Subject* FDSCI

Catalog Number* 510

Long Course Title* Fruit and Vegetable Processing

Short Title* Fruit Vegetable Process

Credit Hours/ Units* 2

Course Description* Fundamental fruit and vegetable processes and related unit operations including blanching, cooling, freezing, canning, irradiation, fermentation, pickling, drying, packaging in relation to quality, safety, and nutritional aspects of related products. Importance of raw material characteristics and storage conditions will be discussed in terms of post-harvest physiology of fruits and vegetables and different product types. Functionality of ingredients common in fruit and vegetable processing will also be introduced.

Need help? See Course Description Guidelines

Rationale and Impact (NEW)

Rationale* Student feedback and food science faculty discussions have shown large interest in a Fruit and Vegetable Processing course. Fruit and vegetable products constitute one of the fundamental commodity areas of food science, which the current curriculum is lacking. Therefore, the proposed course is expected to fill this gap. Currently, there is no course on campus related to processing of fruit and vegetable materials into a final product. The course will cover fundamental concepts and real-life applications of one of the important commodity areas of food processing. The proposed course will also contribute to development of students' quantitative reasoning skills and awareness in the contemporary issues in the area of fruit and vegetable processing technologies.

Impact Statement (i.e. if this impacts another unit)* There is no other Fruit and Vegetable Processing course on campus, therefore it does not directly impact the curriculum of another unit. However, other academic units, such as Horticulture, Grain Science and Industry, and Agricultural and Biological Engineering are likely to benefit from this course as it will be complementary to their existing curricula.

Projected Term* 2202 Spring 2020

Need help? See deadlines <http://www.k-state.edu/curriculum/deadlines/index.html>

Prepares science and engineering majors for more advanced coursework and promotes improved environmental literacy of non-science majors.

Need help? See Course Description Guidelines

Rationale and Impact (CHANGE)

Rationale* The Department of Geography seeks to rename and renumber its long-standing GEOG 221 introductory Physical Geography class to GEOG 121 Introduction to Physical Geography: Earth Systems to better communicate the content and purpose of the course. This course change also reflects separation of the laboratory-portion of GEOG 221 into a separate and new 1 credit hour course GEOG 122 (separate proposal). This secondary change encourages additional enrollment for students needing a physical science course but not a laboratory experience and is in line with the organization of comparable introductory physical science courses at Kansas State University.

Short Title* Phy Sci/Erth Sys Lab

Credit Hours/ Units* 1

Course Description* Laboratory investigation of the processes and spatial pasterns of the atmosphere, biosphere, geosphere, and hydrosphere and their interactions at the Earth's surface.

Need help? See Course Description Guidelines

Rationale and Impact (NEW)

Rationale* This new course reflects proposed changes in a separate document seeking to change the course number and name of GEOG 221 Introductory Physical Geography class to GEOG 121 Introductory Physical Geography: Earth Systems to better communicate the content and purpose of the course. This other proposal also includes separation of the laboratory-portion of GEOG 221 into a new and independent 1 credit hour course GEOG 122. This change encourages additional enrollment for students needing a physical science course but not a laboratory experience and is in line with the organization of comparable introductory physical science courses at Kansas State University.

Impact Statement (i.e. if this impacts another unit)* No anticipated impacts to other departments, but Geology was contacted as a courtesy and did not express any concerns. Advisors will need to be aware of the change so that students who enroll in GEOG 121 to fulfill the requirement of a physical science with a lab also enroll in GEOG 122.

Projected Term* 2202 Spring 2020

Department* History

Subject* HIST

Catalog Number* 155

Long Course Title* U.S. Military History since 1775

Short Title* U.S. Military History

Credit Hours/ Units* 3

Course Description* Studies the history of the military and warfare in U.S. history from 1775-present. Includes strategic, operation, political, and social elements as part of explaining how warfare has shaped U.S. history and how American institutions and history have shaped the U.S. military. Topics include the history and development of the armed forces, the operational history of America's wars, the place of the military in American society, the influence of technological change on warfare, and the role of women and people of color in the armed forces over time.

Need help? See Course Description Guidelines

Rationale and Impact (NEW)

Rationale* This class will allow ROTC cadets to meet their commissioning requirement to take a class on U.S. military history since 1775 without going outside of K-State. It will also diversify the department's introductory-level course options. Providing an introductory-level military history class will serve as a recruiting tool and foundation for the rest of the department's extensive upper-division military history offerings.

Impact Statement (i.e. if this impacts another unit)* The only department this should effect is the Military Science department, and the class is being created as a result of a request of Military Science's head. Peter Gray contacted the history department in January 2018 requesting it offer this class.

Rationale for K-State 8 tag

(H) The class studies the history of war and the military in U.S. history. As such it focuses overwhelmingly on historical perspectives on the role of war in American history, the evolution of the U.S. military over time, and how the military and political leaders have interacted with each other in different historical eras; (G) A comprehensive history of war and the military in US history necessarily involves encounters with peoples and societies from across the globe where the US military fought, occupied and/or established bases throughout history. These encounters included, but are not limited to, the indigenous peoples and societies of North America, as well as the peoples and societies of Asia, Oceania, Europe, Latin America and the Caribbean, Africa, and the Middle East.

Course Description* This course will focus on the role of the hospitality manager as facilitator, trainer, and motivator of employees. High quality employees are vital for success in any organization, and the goal of this course is to provide you with the tools for successfully managing employees to enhance individual and organizational performance. Special attention is given to the unique problems associated with hotels, restaurants, and other hospitality businesses. Upon completion of this course, you should be able to design and implement the most effective methods for attracting, selecting, developing, motivating, and retaining quality employees to promote a competitive advantage for the hospitality organization.

Rationale and Impact (CHANGE)

Rationale* To revise prerequisites to remove HM 376 or HM 377 to reflect current curriculum approved during the 2016 - 2017 academic year. The curriculum was revised to combine the 300-level work experiences into one course, HM 375: Hospitality Work Experience II. Rationale and Impact (CHANGE)

Rationale* The prerequisite to require PFP 305 or FINAN 450 with a grade of "B" or better is changed to "C" or better with and KSU cumulative GPA of 2.5 or higher. This adjustment will remove unnecessary obstacles for students seeking to complete the new Financial Counseling Minor and Kansas Insurance Certificate. We are balancing this by making small changes to the PFP major and minor curriculum to maintain competency requirements that will affect those programs.

K-State 8 Tag 1

K-State 8 Tag 2

Human Diversity within

Rationale for K-State
8 tag

Keeping original Human Diversity in the US, but changing Historical Perspectives to Global Perspectives. Rationale:

Despite mainly aiming to develop learners' basic literacy skills, along with expanding their lexicon and awareness of different oral registers (formal and informal), SPAN 302 (Spanish for heritage speakers) also emphasizes the cultural relevance of the Hispanic community in the US. The latter is achieved through analysis and discussions prompted by the readings to be covered in class. As such, a significant part of the course focuses on exploring various historical moments across Latin America that have shaped the ideology, sociocultural, economic and political bases of different Hispanic countries (e.g., Mexico, Cuba, Colombia, Argentina). The inclusive understanding and perspectives that the students enrolled in SPAN 302 gain, allow them to better understand the elements that make the Hispanic community unique, as well as equipping them with knowledge to discern and value the features that create different subcultural identities across the US and Latin America. For these reasons, we request that SPAN 302 be classified under the following tags: Human Diversity in the US and Global Issues and Perspectives.

Keeping Ethical Reasoning tag, and changing Aesthetic Interpretation to Global Issues and Perspectives. Rationale:

Span 531 focuses on intensive practice in Spanish conversation to develop listening and speaking skills, increase specialized vocabulary, and review grammatical structures. This course is intended to equip students with tools necessary to expand their language skills as well as their cultural knowledge of diverse Hispanic communities living inside and/or outside the United States. The ever-growing population of Spanish-speaking people living in the US offers unlimited professional opportunities for professionals in the health and human services. Span 531 promotes ethical perspectives, responsibility, and critical thinking by exploring global issues, such as gender, class, race, education, and other cultural differences among Spanish-speaking populations, living in the US and abroad, within the context of health and human services.

Perspectives

Rationale for K-State 8 tag

SPAN 550 focuses on aesthetic interpretation of literature, media, and art from the Spanish-speaking world. Throughout the semester, students gain familiarity with vocabulary and concepts used in literature, media, and art to identify how writers and artists express complex ideas and provoke specific reactions. Students engage in discussions, presentations, and written projects to develop these skills.

Students develop cultural awareness for a global perspective in SPAN 550 by discussing relationships between works and their contexts. Works discussed address global issues such as class, ethnicity, gender, identity, conflict, and sustainability, providing opportunities throughout the semester for students to think critically about how their own experiences connect with a variety of creative representations from the Spanish-speaking world.

Spanish 560 focuses on human diversity, by exploring the border as a metaphorical concept in Latinx literature and culture. The course emphasizes aesthetic interpretation, as students analyze the literary and cultural presence of Latin America in the United States by examining poems, essays, novels, and films that inform on the major contributions of Latinx authors to the fields of literature and cultural studies. The course explores concepts of multiple identities, positionalities, literary movements, language and counter-traditions that shape the cultural legacy of Latinx people since the Mexican–American War.

K-State 8 Tag 2

Historical Perspectives

Rationale for K-State 8 tag

Keeping Historical Perspectives, and switching Aesthetic tag to Global Perspectives.
Rationale:

Throughout a historical account of Spain, students gain a global perspective on a European nation in context. Issues such as ethnic and cultural identity, history of regions and heritages, and Transatlantic dialogue comprise the course. Students familiarize themselves with the cultural and historical contexts required to understand the evolution of Spanish civilization, acquiring a thorough awareness of the artistic and literary sensibility of the country. Students conduct research on a topic of their personal interest, via original reflections, while improving on previous grammatical structures.

K-State 8 Tag 1

Global Issues and Perspectives

K-State 8 Tag 2

Rationale for K-State 8 tag

Keeping Historical Perspectives, and switching Aesthetic tag to Global Perspectives.
Rationale:

SPAN 567 focuses on Global Issues and Perspectives of literary and cultural texts, art, and media from the Spanish-speaking world, including Spain, Spanish America, and the United States. Throughout the course, students will critically examine aesthetic tendencies, historical events, and political or social movements that have influenced or affected the cultural production, perspectives, beliefs, behaviors, policies and customs of diverse Spanish-speaking societies of the world. Students will learn to adopt a comparative, transatlantic perspective when examining their own cultural context and the cultural context of Spanish-speaking nations and regions.

Students will explore the relationships and interdependence between Spanish-speaking regions of Spain, Spanish America, and the US by reading and discussing critical articles on the histories and traditions of these regions, their people and cultures. They will think critically about global issues such as class, ethnicity, gender, conflict resolution, globalization, multiculturalism, human rights, and social justice, and how these issues in the Spanish-speaking world compare and impact their own worldviews.

A fundamental objective for SPAN 575 is for students to recognize the importance of sociocultural context in the creation and reading of a text (both original texts and translations), and to apply this awareness when reading and translating. Throughout the semester, as students create and analyze translations, they are thinking critically about how sociocultural context affects the meaning and reception of a text. They apply this global perspective to daily homework, class discussions, written analyses, exams, and translation projects.

Social Sciences

Rationale for K-State
8 tag

Keeping original Social Sciences, but changing Aesthetic Interpretation to Global Perspectives. Rationale:

The main aim of SPAN 580 is exposing students to the linguistic fundamentals of Spanish, such as its sound system, word and sentence formation, and semantic and pragmatic meaning. Additionally, this class enables the analysis and understanding of how the different varieties of the language in question (e.g., Colombian, Mexican, Puerto Rican Spanish) widely vary, and how the interactions amongst different speakers, embedded in varied social factors, such as the sociolinguistic group that an individual belongs to, shape the way in which language itself is perceived, used and approached. Consequently, this knowledge allows students to comprehend and appreciate the cultural values, perspectives, behaviors and beliefs of others. For these reasons, we request that SPAN 580 be classified under the following tags: Social Sciences, and Global Issues and Perspectives.
