Events and Other Things of Note

The over of the Winter 2008 issue of Connections, magazine of the K-State College of Arts & Sciences, featured a photo of Geography major Iris Wilson coring a tree under the supervision of Dr. John Harrington. Iris is one of five Arts &Science students featured in a story by Shanna Williams about undergraduate research opportunities at K-State. The article also contains another photo of Iris examining the tree core with Dr. Kendra McLauchlan on page 8. For those roaming around Seaton Hall, a copy of the article is posted on the hallway bulletin board across from Dr. Marston’s office.
Dr. Marcellus Caldas presented the Ecology and Evolutionary Biology Seminar on 27 March titled "Land Use and Land Cover Change in the Brazilian Amazon: the case of the Para State."

On 24 March, Dr. John Harrington, Jr. gave an invited lecture, "Understanding the Human Dimensions of Global Change: An Overview, Some Contributions, and Challenges," to faculty and students in the School of Earth, Society, and Environment at the University of Illinois.
