Report on the 2004 Annual Business Meeting

The World War Two Studies Association annual business meeting for 2004 convened at the Hyatt regency Bethesda on May 21st, during the Society for Military History annual meeting for 2004. Board members in attendance included Stanley Falk, Allan Millett, and D’Ann Campbell. Association secretary Mark Parillo called the assembly to order and chaired the meeting.

Parillo began by conveying the regrets of Chairman Donald S. Detwiler about his inability to attend due to health problems. Parillo then reported on the past year as newsletter editor and secretary-treasurer. He noted that Jim Ehrman might be leaving the staff shortly because of his imminent hire to a position that would make his continuation as associate newsletter editor much more difficult. The secretary’s report expressed the association’s gratitude to those individuals who participated in the WWTSA-sponsored panel, “Teaching Military History to Undergraduates,” held at the recent annual meeting of the American Historical Association: Dale Clifford of the University of North Florida, John Guilmartin of the Ohio State University, Patrice Olsen of Illinois State University, Lori Lyn Bogle of the U.S. Naval Academy, and Michael Ramsay of Kansas State University. Parillo then called for ideas or suggestions for more panels for the upcoming SMH and AHA annual meetings. The treasurer’s report indicated continued financial solvency for the association and noted that the WWTSA reserve account at the Kansas State University Foundations was uncalled upon again this year, which has allowed that fund to rise to a little more than $800.

Next, Parillo read the association chairman’s report on relations with the International Committee on the History of the Second World War and the 2005 international conference, prepared by the chairman when he had determined that he would be compelled to miss the meeting. The report is included in its entirety as an appendix to this report. Printed copies of the report were distributed to those in attendance.

With no items for action carried over from the previous year, the meeting moved quickly through “old business” to “new business.” The sole item of new business was the presentation of the call for papers by ICHSWW Secretary-General Pieter Lagrou for the 20th International Congress of Historical Sciences, to be held in Sydney, 3-9 July 2005, which the chairman had been appended to his report. Printed copies of the call for papers were made available to those in attendance. Special note was made of Secretary-General Lagrou’s informal extension of the deadline for paper proposals for the conference.

When the meeting moved to calls for business from the floor, there was some discussion about the situation with the international committee and what might be done to improve relations. There was general understanding of the association’s call for patience in response to the actions of the international committee’s leadership. The meeting adjourned after noting that the next business meeting will be held in association with the Society for Military History conference in Charleston, South Carolina in February 2005.

Appendix: Chairman’s Report on Relations with the ICHSWW and the 2005 Conference

During the year since our last business meeting, held in Knoxville, Tennessee, in May 2003, the president, treasurer, and secretary-general of the International Committee for the History of the Second World War have continued the practice, reported in detail in the Spring 2003 newsletter (No. 69, pp. 4-5), of excluding the other members of the executive committee from fulfilling their statutory responsibilities, and the World War Two Studies Association, the Russian Association of Second World War Historians, the British National Committee for the History of the Second World War, and the Canadian Committee for the History of the Second World War are continuing to withhold payment of annual dues.

The ICHSWW’s three principal officers have in the meantime issued a new call for papers for the conference being held in Sydney, Australia, in July 2005. Initially they had proposed, as reported at our annual meeting last year and in our Spring 2003 newsletter (No. 69, pp. 5-6), a round table on “Norms of legitimate warfare in history” since antiquity. The ICHSWW has now “decided on the following proposal for a general debate and discussion: ‘Racism and the barbarisation of warfare in the Twentieth Century.’ This theme will allow us to explore the continuities between both world wars and colonial and post-colonial conflicts.” Although the new theme does not focus sharply on the ICHSWW’s mandate “to promote historical research on the period of the Second World War in all its aspects,” it does far more adequately provide for consideration of World War II in conjunction with World War I and other twentieth-century conflicts.

This new call for papers, a copy of which is appended to this report, states that one-page proposals should be sent to the ICHSWW Secretary-General, Pieter Lagrou, at <lagrou@htp.cnrs.fr>, by 31 May 2004. Because this announcement, sent by surface mail, reached us too late to be included in the Spring 2004 issue of the WWTSA Newsletter (No. 71), I wrote to the Secretary-General asking whether the 31 May 2004 deadline could be extended for a few weeks. He responded that the ICHSWW has to communicate its program to the organizers of the International Historical Congress by 30 June, but if that were “not possible . . . , we might envisage either some blanc entries in the programme, or a later addendum to the on-line version on the Sydney Congress site.”

Unfortunately, as in the case of the ICHSWW conference held in conjunction with the quinquennial Historical Congress in Oslo in 2000, there is no prospect for reimbursement of travel expenses from the WWTSA or from the International Committee for any colleague giving a paper at Sydney. In 2000 it was understood from the beginning that Prof. Mark Stoler’s paper on ‘The Second War in American History and Memory’ would appear in the conference volume, “The Second World War in the 20th Century History” (ICHSWW Bulletin No. 30/31, 1999/2000, pp. 161-174), even though he might be unable to attend. Not having been involved in the planning of the 2005 conference, as I was in the last one, I do not know whether a paper prepared for the symposium next year would be considered for publication in the proceedings if its author were unable to travel to Sydney, but the Secretary-General’s response to my recent enquiry does suggest that American proposals would be welcome. In view of the time constraint, I would recommend that any colleague with a proposal send it by e-mail, airmail, or fax directly to the Secretary-General with an information copy to me.

The Secretary-General
Paris, 3 February, 2004

CALL FOR PAPERS

At the occasion of the 20th International Congress of Historical Sciences, to be held in Sydney, 3-9 July 2005, the International Committee for the History of the Second World War will organize a one-day conference on the following theme: “Racism and the barbarisation of warfare in the twentieth century.”

World War II was the culmination of the escalation of the violence of war in the twentieth century, but it was neither the start nor, tragically, the end of it. In the course of the century, warfare expanded in scale but it also transgressed new thresholds of brutality in the treatment of both combatants and civilian populations. The “barbarisation” of warfare was however not a homogeneous, undifferentiated process, driven primarily by new technologies. Belligerents behaved very differently with different enemies and distinguished particularly between opponents belonging to what they perceived as the “civilised nations” and all others. Racial stereotype very often proved to be a rationale for military and political leaders, but it also motivated the behaviour on the battlefield of individual soldiers. For example, the horror caused by the use of combat gas during the first World War contributed to the establishment of a new interdiction in the warfare “between civilised nations”, but not in conflicts opposing a colonial power and colonised populations, such as the British Army in Iraq and the Italian Army in Ethiopia. During World War II, German soldiers reserved a radically different treatment for British and Soviet PoWs and American soldiers behaved very differently in the Pacific and European theatres of war. In post-war France, the indignation over torture by the German occupier and the glorification of the resistance fight was not incompatible with similar policies... pursued by the French army in Algeria. Racism, clearly, lies at the heart of representations of the enemy; it fuels propaganda and ideology, but it also produces terrifying effects on the battlefield and in occupied societies.

In this conference, we will focus on the following questions:

- What are the continuities and discontinuities from the First World War to the Second World War and the wars of independence in the colonies, in the racial stereotyping of the enemy?

- What was the impact of the colonial experience on belligerent behaviour and post-war conceptions?

- Was the international law of armed conflict circumvented, or simply not formulated to include “uncivilised” nations?

- What was the part of “spontaneous” racism and what that of army instructions, field manuals and war propaganda in the behaviour of combatants?

- The conference strives for the most diverse geographical and chronological coverage possible and especially encourages contributions on lesser known aspects and conflicts.

A one-page proposal should be sent by 31 May 2004 to the Secretary General: <lagrou@ihtp.cnrs.fr>
