

Ideas for Field Experience

The field experience is considered the culminating experience (6 credit hours) of your MPH degree coursework. It is typically completed at the end of your courses so that you may apply the knowledge gained from your graduate instruction. Generally, during your field experience you will complete a capstone project for the agency/organization where you are completing your field experience.

In consultation with your major professor, decide whether to pursue a supervised field experience or an applied research project in the form of a thesis, or a combined field experience and report. Specific policies and procedures governing the field experience are located in the MPH Graduate Handbook.

Placement and supervision of the field experience is the responsibility of the student in consultation with the major professor. Guidelines for the master's thesis or report will be determined by the participating department and must meet the standards set by the Graduate School. Each participating department will determine the format (oral, written, or both) for the final examination of the student.

A good place to start is to review the list below of where former students have gone. Then search the K-REX e-repository which has several Field Experience Reports posted.

Our MPH students have completed their Field Experience practicum with the following agencies and organizations:

Other organizations that offer field experience opportunities for students in public health related fields include:

The Kansas governor's new internship program offers opportunities to see the inner workings of state government. Since this program includes the Department of Health and Environment, this is an opportunity to consider for your field experience: https://governor.ks.gov/serving-kansans/governor/s-office-internship-program

The Department of Homeland Security offers a fellowship in zoonotic and animal disease. MPH students are eligible because K-State is affiliated with the Center of Excellence for Emerging and Zoonotic Diseases (CEEZAD). http://fazd.tamu.edu/2011/09/department-of-homeland-security-career-development-fellowship-awards-in-zoonotic-and-animal-disease-defense/
