

Faculty-Led Study Abroad Programs

Call For Proposals

Development of Faculty-Led Study Abroad Programs

The K-State Study Abroad Office invites qualified K-State professors and instructors to design and teach faculty-led study abroad programs for undergraduate and graduate students. The Study Abroad Office assists faculty in program planning and administration through continuous support and service.

March 1, 2012- FALL SEMESTER COURSE 2012

- Travel during fall break or winter intersession

May 1, 2012- SPRING SEMESTER COURSE 2013

- Travel during winter intersession, spring break or summer travel

August 15, 2012- SUMMER COURSE 2013

- Travel during May intersession or summer travel

Personal and Professional Benefits of Teaching Abroad

- Teach in an Experiential Learning Environment
- Unique Student-Professor Relationship
- Enrich Your Teaching and Research
- Cultural Immersion and Learning
- Network with International Colleagues

Faculty Compensation

- Faculty who teach faculty-led study abroad programs are eligible to receive salary or DRA
- Faculty travel expenses are factored into program budget (including airfare, lodging, meals, international medical insurance, in-country transportation, transportation to/from U.S. point of departure, tour fees, etc.)

Steps to Teaching a Faculty-Led Program

- Schedule a meeting with Rebecca Murrow, Faculty Services Coordinator in Study Abroad (785-532-1695 / rebm@ksu.edu)
- Review faculty leader handbooks and information on the Study Abroad Office website: <http://www.k-state.edu/studyabroad/facultyled>
- Complete program proposal materials and program budgets
- Collaborate with the Study Abroad Office for program development and implementation
- Recruit students to participate in your program
- Teach abroad and enjoy your experience!
- Complete Faculty Leader Program Evaluation upon your return to the U.S.

Interested in joining the K-State Study Abroad listserv? For more information, contact Rebecca Murrow, Faculty Services Coordinator at 785-532-1695 / rebm@ksu.edu