

K-State 2025 Strategic Action and Alignment Plan for the Office of Diversity

1. What are your College's/Major Unit's/Department's mission and vision and how does your organization contribute to achieving the University's vision for K-State 2025? Departments should also indicate how your organization contributes to your College's/Major Unit's vision for K-State 2025.

Mission: The Office of Diversity works in three areas. First, it leads, coordinates, and supports efforts university-wide to expand opportunities at Kansas State University for persons who are multicultural. The Office of Diversity works to insure that any historically under-represented person will find at this university an inclusive environment, full of limitless opportunities to realize his or her potential.

Second, the Office of Diversity supports the development of an authentically harmonious environment both within and between groups. Sometimes, this means addressing the status quo when it is dysfunctional and adversely impacts those who are different. This means implementing conferences, summits, workshops, heritage months, and other programs that educate people and build cultural competence. Very often, this means working one-on-one, having difficult dialogues, and reaching new understandings. What it does not mean is creating an atmosphere of political correctness where people do not feel free to speak their minds and have robust discussions that lead to the rise and fall of ideas.

Third, the Office of Diversity intends for K-State to be the best in class in multiculturalism and diversity. Failure in this area is not an option, no matter how great the challenge or how incremental the process of institutional change might be.

The Office of Diversity promotes multiculturalism and diversity by initiating programs, collaborating with others, identifying and pursuing best practices, making data-driven decisions, applying the methodologies of evaluation and continuous improvement, and raising the money it takes to do this work effectively. We also do this work by helping to diversify the curriculum, and creating partnerships inside and outside the university. We also create and maintain an infrastructure for the promotion of campus diversity, and we continually seek to build a network of allies.

The Office of Diversity does this work for the great state of Kansas, the Midwest, the nation, and the world. As the country's first land-grant university, the Office of Diversity believes in the access mission. The number of multicultural and multiracial people in the state of Kansas is growing rapidly. These individuals need access to higher education to better the quality of their lives and to enhance their life chances. At the same time, the state and the nation need this talent. The data show that those in the K-12 pipeline are increasingly diverse, while those who are exiting the workforce are largely homogenous. With this fact squarely in mind, we do this work to develop high-quality multicultural talent with the K-State brand to sustain the American workforce and take on the world's myriad and vexing challenges.

There is no question that a Top 50 public research institution will have to be a national model in multiculturalism, diversity, and inclusive excellence. This is a defining characteristic of public higher education now, and it will endure into the future. After years of planning and working strategically, Kansas State University has overcome many of its documented deficiencies in diversity to now be recognized nationally for its diversity excellence. The work in the Office of Diversity has contributed to: (1) record numbers of multicultural students enrolling at K-State and as of 2014, record numbers of multicultural students graduating; (2) the recruitment and retention of multicultural persons as faculty, staff, and administrators; (3) the development of award-winning multicultural student organizations and the most outstanding multicultural student leaders; (4) the recognition and celebration of diversity excellence in others; (5) the provision of many high-quality educational and cultural programs; (6) the mobilization of multicultural alumni and friends; (7) the promotion and documentation of diversity-related scholarship; (8) the development of an improved climate for diversity; and (9) a significant improvement in cultural competence in everyone.

To be sure, Kansas State University has come a long way, and we still have a long way to go. The Office of diversity will continue to view the campus as a work in progress, and it will continue to promote multiculturalism, diversity, and inclusive excellence with vigor. For those who are multicultural, we want affirmation, empowerment, equity, and opportunity. For all, we want a place in which to thrive. For our state, we want the talent it needs to innovate and sustain itself, and for our multicultural families and students, we want their dreams to come true.

Vision: Be an outstanding model of diversity and inclusive excellence among Top 50 public universities.

Please note: A list of diversity-related terms and acronyms with definitions can be found at the end of the Strategic Action Plan.

4a. What resources and/or opportunities exist for your College/Major Unit/Department to achieve its vision and outcomes?

The Office of Diversity has the following resources to achieve this mission: (1) an administrative office suite in Anderson Hall and an office for multicultural student organizations in the K-State Student Union; (2) a state budget with two permanent lines, two term positions, and one temporary position; (3) two term program coordinators funded on grants; (4) two graduate assistants-one funded by SGA/EOF and another funded on grants; (5) four peer mentors funded on grants; (6) two student assistants funded by SGA/EOF; (7) an infrastructure of diversity point people in the colleges and college diversity committees; (8) the President's Commission on Multicultural Affairs; (9) multicultural alumni; (10) corporate support and fundraising success; (11) widespread support in communities of color and among parents all across the state and in the region; and (12) the Project IMPACT best practice pipeline of student recruitment and retention programs.

4b. What resources and/or opportunities are needed for your College/Major Unit/Department to achieve its vision and outcomes?

The Office of Diversity needs:

1. Adequate space- The Office of Diversity has too little space for its groups, meetings, programs, staff, equipment, files, supplies, and program materials. Our work and forward progress is being limited by the lack of appropriate space.
2. A dedicated full-time diversity fundraiser- Opportunities for diversity fundraising have never been better, but there are not enough human resources devoted to cultivating and capturing this money. The model of a shared fundraiser has worked to some extent, but the need only increases and now, that need has become all the more urgent with the emergence of plans to build a Multicultural Student Center.

5. How do you propose to acquire the resources needed for your College/Major Unit/Department to accomplish its vision and outcomes?

1. Fundraising is essential and will be done as possible with the time and resources that are available.
2. Re-organize and provide more training for the staff in the Office of Diversity. This will create more efficiency, put more and different expertise into play, and free up more of the associate provost's time for fundraising duties.
3. Continue to produce the measurable outcomes indicative of diversity excellence which make investing in diversity at K-State a compelling case and a competitive advantage to others.
