

HOUSING ADVOCATE*

I work closely with those seeking public housing.

“The future of public housing is a million-dollar question. We are very dependent upon [U.S.] Congress because they are making the decisions and we have to go with the flow to make ends meet.”

“It’s a problem nationwide....Our capital need backlog [in public housing] is growing. [The federal housing agency] tells us is that they want us to think outside the box and think like a business. But it is difficult because there are so many regulations that...prevent us from doing that.”
