Dear Marcia:

Enclosed please find a copy of the report summarizing the results from the Faculty Senate Faculty Salaries and Fringe Benefits Committee Child Care Survey administered in April of 2007. Four hundred forty six faculty and staff members were asked to complete the survey with 192 individuals completing the survey, a 43.05% response rate. The response rate is adequate and therefore, enables you to make inferences on dependent care for K-State Manhattan employees.

For comparison purposes the results have been summarized in three tables. The first table illustrates aggregate data for the survey. Due to the survey design and conditional branching, respondents were asked to answer questions based on previous factors and not all questions were posed to each respondent. Several questions, specifically survey items seven and eight, have a large no response percentage. Table one illustrates the aggregate data from each statement (n=192).

The second table shows the total number of respondents that were asked each statement. Each statement has a corresponding "n" value to illustrate the number of respondents that answered each statement. The percentage responses for each statement were calculated by the number of respondents for each statement.

There were three main groups identified with the survey. The first group, parents with children in a child care facility, answered questions one to fifteen. The second group, parents with children that do not use any type of paid child care, answered questions 1 through 5 and 16 through 24. The final group, parents with children that provide paid in-home care, answered questions 1 through 5 and 25 through 35. Each of these groups is illustrated in table two.

The third table shows respondent comparisons by parent type. The parents of infants, toddlers, and pre-schoolers opinions were compared by four common statements. The parents were asked to state their opinion on: the price of child care, their number of choices of child care, their current child care situation, and the future interest of enrolling their child at a KSU facility. Respondents that did not identify their child or children were removed from the comparison. If respondents had children in multiple classifications, then their responses were included into multiple groups.

The results seem mixed. Thirty six percent of the respondents felt that the price of child care was reasonable with 40.6% of the respondents felt the price was unreasonable. Two thirds of the respondents felt that the number of choices for child care were unreasonable, but almost two thirds of the respondents were either strongly satisfied or satisfied with their current child care situation. However, 75.5% of the respondents stated they would be interested in enrolling their child(ren) in a new campus facility. Comparisons by parent type showed little or no difference in opinion.

If you have any questions or would like to discuss these results further, please feel free to contact Chris Feit or myself. We appreciate working with you and providing you this data.

Sincerely,

Kelli Cox
Director
