

STUDENT LEARNING OUTCOMES:

Upon completion of the Gender, Women, and Sexuality Studies major, students will be able to:

1. analyze the ways in which diverse identities, cultures, and societies are structured by the intersections of social categories including gender, race, class, sexuality, ability, global location, and coloniality;
2. communicate effectively in verbal and written form, concepts and arguments related to gender, women, and sexualities;
3. critically analyze historical and social relations, hierarchies of power, resistance, and movements relevant to gender, women, and sexualities;
4. understand and apply feminist and related theories, methodologies, and methods;
5. demonstrate the ability to work with, develop, or implement plans related to the needs and goals of diverse people.