Section ZA: Distance –Tushabe

This course investigates the intersection of race, gender, and sexuality. The course will explore complex relations among identity categories such as lesbian, gay, bisexuality, and transgender in relation to class, gender, ethnicity, religion, and nationality. The course will be divided into three central parts: the sexualization of race and the racialization of sexuality; socio-cultural perspectives on race and sexuality; and queering the Color Line and histories of oppression, including colonialism. We will read some of the most influential authors in Gender Theory, Queer Theory, Race Theory, Sexuality Studies, and Transgender studies.
