CONFERENCE ON CAPTURED GERMAN AND RELATED RECORDS

On November 12 and 13, 1968, the National Archives sponsored a program on "Captured German and Related Records," which called attention to the fact that the bulk of German records have now been returned to the Bundesarchiv in Coblenz, and that the depository at Alexandria, Va., where many of the papers had been kept, is closed. The microfilms of German and Italian records, amounting to over 20,000,000 frames, are now mostly in the National Archives in Washington, D.C.

The available rolls are itemized in List of National Archives Microfilm Publications (Washington, 1968). Aids to locating material are listed in the September, 1968, edition of Publications of the National Archives and Records Service. This pamphlet mentions the "Supplement to the Guide to Captured German Documents" (the original Guide was prepared for the AHA by Gerhard L. Weinberg of Michigan in 1952); and it lists also the 59 mimeographed guides to various sections of the records. The guides do not cover the entire collection but ultimately they will. The guides are currently in short supply and available only to institutions.

The programs included papers on the documents themselves and on uses made of them at Nuremberg, by the Office of the Chief of Military History, by the State Department, by the Army, Navy, and Air Force. Texts of the papers will be made available by the National Archives. Some of the points which may be of interest to historians of the Second World War would include:

Three volumes of the projected four volumes of a Catalogue of Files and Microfilms of the German Foreign Ministry Archives, 1920-1945 have been compiled and edited by George O. Kent, formerly of the State Department Historical Office, under a joint project of the Department of State and the Hoover Institution. Volume III appeared in 1966 and the fourth volume is forthcoming.

Several hundred military historical studies, prepared under U.S. aegis after the war by high-ranking German officers who were given access to the captured records for this purpose, are currently being transferred by the Office of the Chief of Military History (OCMH) to the National Archives, and will eventually be available for consultation there and for purchase on microfilm. Similar studies prepared for the U.S. Air Force by former Luftwaffe officers, are available at Maxwell Field, Alabama, at Wright Field, Columbus, Ohio, and some at the National Archives. These studies are listed and briefly described in the Guide to Foreign Military Studies, 1945-1954 (Historical Division, U.S. Army, 1954), and its Supplement (1959).

Most of the German Naval Archives (the "Tambach Castle" collection), covering the period from 1850-1945, was microfilmed in England shortly after the war by the U.S. Navy. The approximately 3,900 reels produced are gradually being transferred to the National Archives, which will prepare microfilmed finding aids, and eventually printed catalogues.

At the conclusion of the National Archives conference, the director of the Bundesarchiv at Coblenz, Dr. Mommsen, made a brief statement. He pointed out that the Militärarchiv at Freiburg is under Bundesarchiv administration. Although there are many gaps, due to the war and destruction of the Heeresarchiv in 1945, there are almost complete Reich Chancellory records from 1918. There are good collections in Finance, Justice, the SS, and Wehrmacht commands. The Navy records are the only ones that permit an unbroken record into the 19th century.

In addition to basic records, there are collections of private papers, posters, election materials of the Weimar Republic, documentary films, and newsreels. An inventory is in process of being made, to be published in 1969.

The director of the Institut für Zeitgeschichte in Munich, Dr. Helmut Krausnick, also made a brief statement:

The Institut has been attempting to catalogue materials for contemporary history. So far there are 1,800 rolls, covering 3,200,000 pages of documents, with 800 more rolls in process. The Institut compiles card files on material according to categories: for example, 8,700 entries on the SS, 5,000 on Jews, 5,000 on Hitler. It also has available Reportoria or Search books, arranged according to original sources. These may be xeroxed for scholars. (The Hoover Library has copies.)

WORK IN PROGRESS

One function of the current Newsletter is to keep interested persons informed regarding research in the World War II period. The Office of External Research in the Department of State has for eighteen years published lists of current social science research by private scholars and academic centers, and many items recorded in these lists have dealt with the Second World War. The current series is, however, the last to be published. To quote from the Office: "After June 1968 the Office of External Research will no longer collect information in the same way on research in progress dealing with foreign areas and international affairs. . . . In the future the Office will concentrate its bibliographic and documentation efforts in the Foreign Affairs Research Documentation Center, which houses a collection of unpublished research papers made available to State Department and other U.S. Government officers. . . . Further information may be obtained from the Office of External Research, Academic Relations Division, Department of State, Washington, D.C. 20520." Information about Government-sponsored foreign area research in the social sciences, and about relations between Government and private research organizations may be found in the new pamphlet Far Horizons, published bimonthly for the interagency Foreign Area Research Coordination Group by the State Department's Office of External Research.

The following list has been compiled from communications to the Newsletter:

PUBLICATIONS

The Franklin D. Roosevelt Library has published (1967): "The Era of Franklin D. Roosevelt: A Selected Bibliography of Periodical and Dissertation Literature, 1945-1966," compiled and annotated by William J. Stewart. Over 350 items relate to the World War II period.

The Historical Branch of the Marine Corps has available "An Annotated Bibliography of the United States Marine Corps in the Second World War" (Washington, D.C.: Historical Branch, G-3 Division, HQ, U.S. Marine Corps, 1965). The list contains 214 items.

The last two volumes of the five-volume History of the U.S. Marine Corps Operations in World War II should appear in 1969, as the texts have by now been sent to the Government Printing Office. Several civilian publishers have indicated that they intend to republish some or all of the 15 campaign monographs (all long out of print) which were completed between 1947 and 1955.

Many readers of this Newsletter will already be familiar with the British magazine, History of the Second World War, of which Sir Basil Liddell Hart is editor-in-chief, and Barrie Pitt the editor. This journal, produced in active cooperation with the Imperial War Museum, is profusely illustrated. While its articles are popular in style, they are authoritative and in many cases written by outstanding experts in the field. The periodical appears weekly, and is published by Purnell & Sons, Ltd., St. Giles House, 49 Poland Street, London, W.1. U.S. annual cost is $47.00.

The editors of History of the Second World War are currently sponsoring a series of paperbacks (retailed in the U.S. by Ballantine Books) on various aspects of the war. Twelve of these are listed in the bibliography section.
