GENERAL INFORMATION

Established in 1967 "to promote historical research in the period of World War II in all its aspects," the American Committee on the History of the Second World War is a private organization supported by the dues and donations of its members. It is affiliated with the American Historical Association, with the International Committee for the History of the Second World War, and with corresponding national committees in other countries, including Austria, Belgium, Canada, Finland, France, East and West Germany, Israel, Italy, the Netherlands, Poland, Romania, the Soviet Union, Spain, and the United Kingdom. The ACHSWW meets annually with the American Historical Association. The 1990 annual meeting will be held in December in New York City.

THE NEWSLETTER

The ACHSWW issues a semiannual newsletter (assigned International Standard Serial Number [ISSN] 0885-5668 by the National Serial Data Program of the Library of Congress). Back issues of the newsletter are available through the ACHSWW Archivist (at the address on the letterhead) from Sunflower University Press. The first eighteen issues (1968-1978) are available as a spiral-bound, 360-page xerox paperback (ISBN 0-89126-060-9) for $36.00. Subsequent back numbers are available as single, unbound issues for $3.00 each. (There is no postal charge for prepaid orders to addresses in the United States; there is a $4.00 shipping charge for orders to foreign and Canadian addresses.)

ANNUAL MEMBERSHIP DUES AND SUPPORT

Membership in the ACHSWW is open to anyone interested in the era of the Second World War. Annual membership dues of $10.00 are payable at the beginning of each calendar year. (Students with U.S. addresses may, if their circumstances require it, pay annual dues of $2.00 for up to six years.) There is no surcharge for members abroad, but it is requested that dues be remitted directly to the secretary of the committee (not through an agency or a subscription service) in U.S. dollars. (The newsletter, which is mailed at bulk rates within the United States, will be sent by surface mail to foreign addresses unless special arrangements are made to cover the cost of airmail postage.) A membership renewal form is regularly attached to the fall issue of the newsletter.

COMMITTEE ELECTIONS

Election Results for the 1990-1992 Term

The eight directors listed in the lower left-hand margin of the first page of this newsletter have been reelected to three-year terms from January 1990 through December 1992.

Nominations and Elections for the 1991-1993 Term

The chairman of the ACHSWW is a vice president of the International Committee for the History of the Second World War. He does not hold this office on an ex officio basis, but is elected to it by the representatives of the national committees constituting the assembly of the International Committee, which meets every five years in conjunction with the quinquennial International Congress of Historical Sciences. By the same token, the secretary of the ACHSWW represents the American Committee as a member of the Executive Commission of the International Committee. The current five-year terms of the officers of the International Committee will end at the meeting to be held at the end of August and beginning of September 1990 in Madrid, when new officers and Executive Commission members will be elected.

Prof. Arthur L. Funk of the University of Florida has declined nomination for reelection in Madrid to the international vice presidency because at the end of 1990 he is stepping down, after fifteen years, from the ACHSWW chairmanship, with which the International Committee office is linked. Prof. Donald S. Detwiler of Southern Illinois University, who succeeded Prof. Funk as ACHSWW secretary in 1976, has accepted nomination, by the board of directors of the American Committee, for the ACHSWW chairmanship. Prof. D. Clayton James of the Virginia Military Institute has accepted nomination to succeed him as secretary.

With the ACHSWW election being held this spring, rather than in the fall, the future officers of the American Committee can be elected in Madrid this summer to their respective International Committee posts, the chairman-elect to the vice presidency and the secretary-elect to membership in the Executive Commission.

Ballots for the election of ACHSWW officers and directors for the 1991-93 term are attached to this newsletter. Please return them for the tally at the end of May.

THE 1989 ANNUAL MEETING

The annual meeting of the ACHSWW was held during the last week of December 1989, in conjunction with that of the American Historical Association, at the San Francisco Hilton.

The Joint Session with the AHA

Mrs. Agnes F. Peterson of the Hoover Institution chaired the joint session at 9:30 a.m., Thursday, 28 December, in Continental Ballroom 6. Prof. Norman Graebner of the University of Virginia read a paper on "Roosevelt, Chamberlain, and the Coming of the War" on which Professors Edward M. Bennett of Washington State University, Warren F. Kimball of Rutgers University at Newark, and Williamson Murray of Ohio State University commented. The well-attended session concluded with a discussion in which several members of the audience participated.

The Business Meeting

The business meeting was convened at 5:00 p.m., Thursday, 28 December, in the Teakwood Room by the committee chairman, Prof. Arthur L. Funk of the University of Florida. As ACHSWW treasurer, the committee secretary, Prof. Donald S. Detwiler of Southern Illinois University at Carbondale, reported on the committee's income and expenses during the past budget year, from 1 December 1988 to 30 November 1989, at the end of which the committee had a bank balance of $113.57. Prof. Detwiler also acknowledged twenty-one members' donations totaling $263 to a dedicated grant-in-fund at Southern Illinois University to help defray costs not borne by dues. The treasurer's report was accepted without objection.

Prof. Funk thanked the members of the panel for the joint session earlier in the day. He went on to announce the tentative approval by the AHA Program Committee of the proposed joint session for the 1990 annual meeting, to be held at the New York Hilton at the end of December, "Dwight D. Eisenhower, 1890-1969: A Centenary Prospect." The session is to be chaired by Forrest C. Pogue, who until his retirement was director of the Dwight D. Eisenhower Institute at the Smithsonian Institution's National Museum of American History. Papers will be given on Eisenhower and Churchill by Stephen E. Ambrose, on Eisenhower and de Gaulle by Arthur L. Funk, and on Eisenhower, Eleanor Roosevelt, and human rights by Blanche Wiesen Cook. The two commentators will be Martin Blumenson, formerly with the Center of Military History, and John E. Wickman, the retiring director of the Eisenhower Library.

Regarding the meeting of the International Committee for the History of the Second World War at the end of August and beginning of September in Madrid, Prof. Funk noted that final arrangements had not yet been confirmed, but that the planned symposium on "The Road to War," focusing on public opinion, is to include contributions by two directors of the American Committee:

- 1) Robert Wolfe, Director of the Captured German Records Staff, National Archives, and a specialist on German-American relations, is scheduled to give a paper on American attitudes and policy toward Germany from the time of the Weimar Republic to the eve of the United States' entry into the war; and

2) Prof. Ronald H. Spector of the University of Alabama (to which he returned from the Naval Historical Center), author of Eagle Against the Sun: The American War with Japan (New York: Free Press, 1985; paperback repr., Vintage Books, 1985), is to present a corresponding paper on American-Japanese relations, taking into account the impact on them of the Sino-Japanese War.

Prof. Funk went on to announce that he and Robert Wolfe had recently met with the Archivist of the United States, Dr. Don Wilson, and proposed that the National Archives, in cooperation with the ACHSWW, conduct during the early 1990s one or more scholarly conferences focussed on significant aspects of the war being waged fifty years earlier. Dr. Wilson was receptive to the initiative, and it was agreed that the matter should be pursued.

Turning to committee business, Prof. Funk announced that he would not seek reelection after his fifth term, which ends in December 1990. He also announced that Prof. Detwiler had agreed to stand for election as his successor and that, in response to a memorandum to the directors, one of them, Prof. D. Clayton James, a committee member since 1971, had volunteered to serve as secretary and newsletter editor. He mentioned Prof. James' having written that, if he were nominated and elected, it was understood at his institution that he would delegate much of the administrative work of the committee to his full-time administrative assistant and collaborator, a former archivist and associate professor recruited with him from Mississippi by the Virginia Military Institute.

At the invitation of the committee chairman, Prof. Theodore A. Wilson of the University of Kansas spoke of plans being made at Kansas to "create, over the next several years, hopefully working closely with the American Committee," an institute for studies on what he characterized as "the most important cultural event of the twentieth century," World War II.

Prof. Harold C. Deutsch of the University of Minnesota and the Army War College announced the formation in the Twin Cities (Minneapolis and St. Paul) of a World War II Round Table. Since its establishment in 1987, it has attracted active support, involving veterans, and enjoyed wide public interest, with participation of high school and college students and representatives of all ages and walks of life. Attendance at its monthly meetings has approached one hundred. Prof. Deutsch predicts a comparable response to World War II Round Tables that could be set up throughout the country. The next step would be for the World War II Round Tables to become affiliated in a national federation that would facilitate sharing ideas for programs and other information of organizational and procedural interest. He invited anyone interested in starting a local round table to contact him or his friend and former student, the executive secretary of the Twin Cities World War II Round Table (of which Prof. Deutsch is adviser), Donald G. Patton, 7600 Parklawn Ave., Suite 200, Edina, MN 55435, (612) 835-7600. Prof. Deutsch's address is in the appended ACHSWW Membership Directory.

Reporting on plans for the continuing series of U.S.-Soviet symposia on the history of the Second World War, Prof. Warren F. Kimball of Rutgers University at Newark said that funding had been unavailable for a fourth symposium in fall 1989, but that if funding becomes available, a fourth symposium will be held, probably at Rutgers or in its environs, in October of 1990. Prof. Kimball reported also on a tripartite project, with American, British, and Soviet participation, to prepare on a cooperative basis a book of essays on the Second World War. Four scholars from each country are to provide essays covering the home front, the military, the economy, and diplomacy in their own country. In addition to these three sets of four essays, there are to be six further essays in the book, jointly written, providing more general coverage at the international level, with consideration of the countries' perceptions of each other. Plans are also being made for the publication of a collection of translated and annotated documents selected from the official sixteen-volume Russian publication on Soviet foreign relations during the war. Once the documents are selected, Prof. Kimball stressed, the Soviet historians will have to arrange for their responsible Western counterparts to consult the originals from the Soviet Archives.

Prof. Deutsch commented that it is possible, under the present Soviet leadership, that there may well be, in the next year or two, considerable opening up for research. But one should bear in mind, in dealing with the Russians, that they need to be told how sorry we are that the Fulbright grants to the Soviet Union only deal with teaching. They do not have any kind of research appointments. If they really do want to open things up, there will have to be support for research, as well. Prof. Weinberg added that there is another, very grave dimension to the problem: unless the holdings in the Soviet and East European archives are made accessible for microfilming and are filmed in the next few years, it will be too late. The quality of the paper of the documents is so poor that much of the information on them already is in serious jeopardy, if not lost. "East European scholars have to realize that if they do not insist on these films," Prof. Weinberg stressed, "those countries are all cutting themselves off--permanently--from their own past."

Prof. Funk announced that the University of Texas, in cooperation with the Battle of Normandy Museum in Caen, is conducting in spring 1990 a special study program on World War II with some thirty-five students. They will first study in Austin under Prof. Martin Blumenson (on a visiting appointment), Prof. Robert Divine, and others. After a month they move to Caen for several weeks' work. Toward the end of the term they return to Austin for the conclusion of the program.

Prof. Detwiler introduced the chairman of the Finnish Committee on the History of the Second World War, Prof. Olli Vehvilainen of the University of Tampere, who attended the business meeting as a member of the International Committee, and was giving a paper the next day on the Finnish Winter War.

The meeting was adjourned shortly before 7:00 p.m.

FUTURE MEETINGS AND CONFERENCES

International Committee Meeting in Madrid (Summer 1990)

According to the most recent information received from the International Committee for the History of the Second World War, the quinquennial meeting is to be held during the latter part of the week of the International Congress (26 August - 2 September); it is to begin with a symposium lasting a day and a half (Friday, 31 August, and Saturday morning, 1 September) and to conclude with the general meeting of the representatives of the national committees on Saturday afternoon.

The draft program for the symposium on "The Road to War" tentatively lists sixteen contributions, about half dealing with "The Future War and Public Opinion . . ." in Britain, Denmark, France, Norway, etc. Prof. Juergen Rohwer of the Federal Republic of Germany will present a paper on "The Visions on the Future War amongst the Military Theoreticians." The special perspective of post-Civil War Spain will be reflected in the paper by Prof. Antonio Marquina of Madrid, "Public Opinion, Propaganda, and Spanish Neutrality, 1939-1940."

At a planning session of the International Committee Board (i.e., the executive committee), Secretary General Harry Paape reportedly expressed his regret that time would not be available for the participants to do more than read summaries of their papers. He was also concerned that it was often impossible for participants and other interested parties to obtain copies after the meeting. He therefore proposed that arrangements should be made to obtain copies of all the papers, so that they might be made available in book form. If such arrangements are made, they will be announced in this newsletter.

The International Committee's meeting in Madrid is being held in conjunction with the International Congress of Historical Sciences (CISH), much as the ACHSWW meets with the AHA. Bethesda Travel Service, (800) 441-1670 or (301) 656-1670, has information on AHA's arrangements for discounted air fare. Information regarding arrangements in Spain may be solicited from the Madrid convention bureau:

Projected National Archives Conferences (1992 and 1994)

Preliminary planning will soon begin for two major conferences on World War II to be held at the National Archives with the cooperation of the ACHSWW: one in 1992 and a second in 1994. Mr. George C. Chalou, Interagency Liaison Officer of the National Archives, will meet this spring with two senior directors of the ACHSWW, Robert Wolfe and D. Clayton James, to develop a proposed agenda for review at the Archives and by the Committee. The outcome of the initial talks will be reported in the next newsletter.

Conference on the Pacific War and Modern Memory (1991)

Inquiries and suggestions are being solicited for an interdisciplinary conference, "The Pacific War and Modern Memory: War, Culture, and Society," planned for December 1991. The conference will seek to develop themes covering all belligerents in the Second World War in Asia, with special emphasis on Japan and the United States. Please direct correspondence to Theodore F. Cook, Jr., Pacific War Conference Co-Chair, Department of History, The William Paterson College of New Jersey, Wayne, NJ 07470. Phone: (201) 595-2319.

ANNOUNCEMENTS AND COMMUNICATIONS

Planned Exhibition on the World War II Home Front (1991)

Dr. Joseph F. Meany, Jr., Senior Historian, New York State Museum (Room 3097, C.E.C., Albany, New York 12230), writes that his museum is engaged in planning a major temporary exhibition to open on 7 December 1991 to be entitled "The Home Front Experience: New York, State and City, in World War II."

U.S. Air Force Historical Research Center Research Grants

The USAF Historical Research Center (USAFHRC) announces research grants to encourage scholars to study the history of air power through the use of the USAF historical document collection at the Center. The Center will make several awards up to $2,500 each to individuals who meet the criteria in this announcement and are willing to visit the Center for research during fiscal year 1991 (ending 30 September 1991). Recipients will be designated "Research Associates of the USAF Historical Research Center."

Criteria.--Applicants must have a graduate degree in history or related fields, or equivalent scholarly achievements. Their specialty or professional experience must be in aeronautics, astronautics, or military-related subjects. They must not be in residence at Maxwell AFB, Alabama, and must be willing to visit the USAF Historical Research Center at Maxwell for a sufficient time to use the research materials at the Center for their proposed projects.

Topics of Research.--Proposed topics of research may include, but are not restricted to, Air Force history, military operations, education, training, administration, strategy, tactics, logistics, weaponry, technology, organization, policy, activities, and institutions. Broader subjects suitable for a grant include military history, civil-military relations, the history of aeronautics or astronautics, relations among U.S. branches of service, military biographies, and international military relations. Preference will be given to those proposals that involve the use of primary sources held at the Center. Proposals for research of classified subjects cannot be considered for research grants. As a general rule, records before 1955 are largely unclassified, while many later records remain classified. Examples of classified subjects include nuclear weapons and war planning, weapon systems now in the Air Force inventory, and Air Force operations during the Vietnam War.

Application Deadline.--Applicants may request an application from the Commander, USAF Historical Research Center, Maxwell AFB, Alabama 36112-6678. They must return the completed applications by 31 October 1990.

Annual Meetings in January after 1993

Responding to the preference of 51% percent of those who responded to a November 1989 poll of the membership of the American Historical Association, the AHA Council resolved, at the 1989 meeting in San Francisco, to schedule the annual meeting, after 1993, during the first week of January. The AHA will continue to meet in December in 1990 (New York City), 1991 (Chicago), 1992, and 1993. Thereafter, the annual meeting will be scheduled for the first Thursday through Sunday of January after New Year's Day. The dates of the meeting will fluctuate from 2-5 January at the earliest (in 1997) to as late as 8-11 January.

Discontinuation of Two AHA Bibliographical Publications

At its 1989 meeting, the Council also resolved to discontinue, by the end of 1990, publication by the American Historical Association of two major bibliographical tools, Recently Published Articles, which appears in spring, summer, and fall, and Writings in American History, a volume appearing annually. The AHA Council voted to establish a task force "to review on an urgent basis the coverage of the bibliographic tools available to the profession" (Perspectives: American Historical Association Newsletter, Vol. 28, No. 2 [February 1990], p. 3). The report of the AHA Council meeting in which these interesting tidings were buried also includes the news that the Council accepted the AHA Finance Committee's report: "Finding that the gap between revenue and expenses seemed to be widening, the Committee recommended the development of a package of revenue enhancement measures" (ibid.).

Since the Rundell Report recommending an AHA Bibliographical Center decades ago, studies of this sort have been periodically initiated in order to at least keep tabs on the growth of the problem of bibliographical control, even though there is no prospect for a comprehensive solution. (Considering the nature of history, there never can be.) Until now, however, the American Historical Association, chartered by Congress, has accepted as a mandate the responsibility to provide the basic coverage in its three indispensable publications: The American Historical Review, Writings in American History, and Recently Published Articles. It would be ironic if the latter two--no matter how "outmoded and uneconomic" (ibid.) they may seem to those with electronic access by modem to a choice of databases--should be discontinued just as millions in countries where an electric typewriter is a luxury may finally have an opportunity to use them freely.

Bibliographical coverage, to be complete, requires a continuing collection effort. The American Historical Association, which has been handling the two serials from its Washington office, must--notwithstanding its straitened circumstances--provide for the continuing collection of materials. Otherwise, a unique scholarly enterprise that has flourished for decades will die on the vine.

Anyone wishing to express concern to the American Historical Association regarding the discontinuation of these two publications--and the implied decision to abandon the bibliographical collection effort--may write to the vice president in charge of the AHA Research Division, Prof. Richard T. Vann, Department of History, Wesleyan University, Middletown, Connecticut 06457.

ARCHIVAL AND BIBLIOGRAPHICAL RESOURCES

Because of the length of the ACHSWW Membership Directory in this issue of the newsletter, the archival and bibliographical coverage is limited to an update on the OSS Collection at the National Archives and brief notes on two bibliographies.

OSS Records at the National Archives: An Update

Since the spring 1988 issue of this newsletter, with a detailed report on OSS holdings at the National Archives kindly provided by Dr. Lawrence H. McDonald, the Archives have accessioned an additional 248 cubic feet of textual records from the Central Intelligence Agency, which has had custody of these OSS records. Recent shipments, according to Dr. McDonald, consist largely of OSS Secret Intelligence Branch and Counterintelligence (X-2) Branch records. It is understood that the CIA plans to transfer to the National Archives at least another two hundred to three hundred feet of these records in the coming months.

A group of volunteers (now numbering nineteen), working under Dr. McDonald's supervision, has written descriptive lists for most OSS records accessioned by spring 1988, and these lists have been entered into a computerized database. This has made it possible to generate nine different printouts that sort the OSS records in detail: in order of entry, by point of origin, by OSS branch or unit, by type of file, by associated location, by area, by names of persons, by subject, and by code-name or mission-name.

The labeling, listing, and entering of all these lists in a single database for computerized retrieval has done more than restore the original arrangement of these records, which was changed through years of use since they were compiled. It has facilitated research, by making it possible to identify and access individual files in a once inaccessible mass of material--and to do so right down to the level of an individual manila folder. It is therefore hardly surprising that the OSS records, with the detailed finding aids now available, are more called for than any other twentieth-century records.

Among publications based largely or in part on material in the OSS Collection, two recent books may be of particular interest:

Barry M. Katz, Foreign Intelligence: Research and Analysis in the Office of Strategic Services, 1942-1945 (Cambridge, Mass.: Harvard University Press, 1989, ix & 251 pp., $27.50), is an academic study of how scholars in the Research and Analysis Branch of OSS adapted their academic methods and experience to the work of the OSS during the war and then, afterwards, as OSS veterans, resumed their scholarship--but often in a way that reflected their wartime experience.

Max Corvo, The OSS in Italy, 1942-1945: A Personal Memoir (New York, Westport, and London: Praeger, 1990, x & 324 pp., $29.95), is a sophisticated memoir by a Connecticut newspaper publisher who served in the OSS Secret Intelligence Branch in Caserta. He has drawn heavily on the OSS collection, illuminated by his own perspective, and has thereby made a significant--and readable--contribution to the literature in the field.

Two Bibliographies

A. G. S. Enser, A Subject Bibliography of the Second World War, and Aftermath: Books in English 1975-1987 (Brookfield, Vermont: Gower, 1990, xii & 287 pp., $69.95), is an expanded edition of Enser's earlier volume that listed books in English published between 1975 and 1983. The unannotated, unnumbered entries are listed alphabetically under alphabetized subject headings (Abyssinia, Africa, Afrika Korps, Aftermath [general], . . . Yalta, Yugoslavia, Zipper Operation). The author index (pp. 245-282) lists the names of the authors followed by the titles of their books. An "Index of Titled Books Only" (pp. 283-84) lists books without authors. The subject index (pp. 285-287) can be used as a detailed table of contents. The author notes in the preface that "in general, works of less than thirty pages, poetry, fiction, juvenile literature, humour, and the publications of the War Graves Commission have been omitted."

John J. Sbrega, The War Against Japan, 1941-1945: An Annotated Bibliography, Wars of the United States (Richard L. Blanco, General Editor), vol. 10; Garland Reference Library of Social Science, vol. 258 (New York and London: Garland Publishing, 1989, xxv & 1,050 pp., $95.00), is a helpfully annotated, selective bibliography with over 5,200 sequentially numbered entries "drawn from books, journals, magazines, and official documents related to the participation of the United States in the war against Japan, 1941-1945," published in English through 1987. Coverage is not provided on controversies such as the "loss" of China, but there is material on such issues as the plight of the Nisei in America (entries 4740-4992, pp. 865-916). As outlined in the detailed table of contents (with four levels of subheadings), the volume has six main sections:

- I. References and general works;
- II. Diplomatic-political aspects of the war;
- III. Economic and legal aspects (including war crimes and postwar trials, entries 1550-1626, pp. 317-332);
- IV. Military aspects (including, under "Special Weapons," extensive coverage of the development of the atomic bomb, the decision to use it, its use, and its physiological impact, as reflected in subsequent medical literature, entries 3852-4157 under subheadings IV.J.2.a-IV.J.2.b.ii, pp. 725-786);
- V. Religious aspects (entries 4241-4279, pp. 807-813);
- VI. Social and cultural aspects (including unannotated fictional accounts [entries 4363-4609, pp. 829-844] and poetry [entries 4610-4635, pp. 844-45]).

Published from camera-ready typescript, the volume concludes with an author index (pp. 993-1037) and a subject index (pp. 1039-1050). There is no title index, but given the well-conceived structure of the book, that should not detract greatly from the usefulness of this carefully prepared bibliography. It is a valuable contribution to the study and teaching of the Second World War.

MEMBERSHIP DIRECTORY

Members of the American Committee on the History of the Second World War are listed below in alphabetical order. The entries reflect the information provided, through March 1990, on the annual membership renewal form--in some cases the individual or institutional name and address only, in others, the member's academic, military, or other rank or title and affiliation, as well as any particular area[s] of interest or specialization.
