

Unauthorized Aid vs Collaboration

A FAMILY
BUILT ON

UNAUTHORIZED AID: Using any non-approved resources without the knowledge or consent of the instructor.

UNAUTHORIZED COLLABORATION: Working with another person without the knowledge or consent of the instructor.

Questions to ask yourself before working on assignment, projects, papers, and exams:

- Can I work with others on this assignment or exam?
- Can use my course materials including my textbook and notes during this exam?
- Can I share my answers to assignment and exam questions with other students?
- Can I use notes, assignments, or exams that other students have given me?
- Can I receive assistance from others with the ideas/content for this paper or project?
- Can others to help me identify sources or references for this paper or project?

If you answered YES to any of these questions this is an example of AUTHORIZED aid and you may use these resources to complete your academic work.

However, if you answered NO to any of these questions this is an example of UNAUTHORIZED aid and doing so will result in an Honor Pledge Violation.

Tips to Avoid Unauthorized Aid and Collaboration:

- ✓ Carefully read through your course syllabus
- ✓ Ask course instructor if you need clarification
- ✓ Read through the instructions before submitting course work
- ✓ Ask your professor if any collaboration is allowed
- ✓ Stay away from course group chats where students are asking for or sharing answers, and
- ✓ Avoid online tutoring and paper mill websites like Chegg.com, Coursehero.com, OPPapers.com, etc.
