Kuester to lead Association for Arid Lands Studies

The association's next meeting will take place in April 2009 in conjunction with the 51st annual conference of the Western Social Science Association. Kuester will assume the role of co-chairman for assessment efforts across the university.

Progress and possibilities, continued

opportunity to extend our knowledge descriptions to new assessment approaches and experiences across the campus and region. Some feel such an assessment isn't necessary. "We're becoming a more complex institution, and a more complex institution requires greater assessment," said Johnson.

"These two individuals have committed their lives to the university, and they've done an extraordinary job," Kuester said.

Winning habits, continuous improvement

We have to have a culture that is learning every day and that is learning not just in a professional sense, but in a personal sense, too," Brown said. "I do feel that the best is yet to come."

Rueckert said that the best is yet to come. He believes that K-State can be a "land-grant university in America that is as good today as when it was founded 150 years ago." Brown said that K-State has "for ambitious, intelligent, creative, and diverse students to get things done."

For Kansas State University faculty and staff

"At K-State, we empower people," said Rueckert.

State of the University

Wefald attributes success to teamwork and inspirational leadership

"At K-State, we empowerment people," said Rueckert.

For Kansas State University faculty and staff

"At K-State, we empower people," said Rueckert.

State of the University

Wefald attributes success to teamwork and inspirational leadership

"At K-State, we empowerment people," said Rueckert.
Progress and possibilities at K-State

Provost Nellis tells success stories as university moves forward

To improve on the territory, experience, operation and leadership of faculty and administration have improved a successful environment for future success in the 21st century said Provost Duane T. Nellis, vice president, and vice president, and dean of the University of Kansas. Nellis had several initiatives that are known as “K-State 15.”

In his speech, he mentioned the need for the university to be more competitive with other institutions, such as the University of Missouri. However, Nellis also spoke of the need for the university to be more innovative and creative.

Nellis said that the university’s main goal is to be a top 10 university in the United States and one of the top 10 in the world. He also spoke about the need for the university to be more innovative and creative, especially in the areas of research and technology.

In his speech, Nellis also spoke about the need for the university to be more competitive with other institutions, such as the University of Missouri. However, he also spoke of the need for the university to be more innovative and creative.

Nellis said that the university’s main goal is to be a top 10 university in the United States and one of the top 10 in the world. He also spoke about the need for the university to be more innovative and creative, especially in the areas of research and technology.

In his speech, Nellis also spoke about the need for the university to be more competitive with other institutions, such as the University of Missouri. However, he also spoke of the need for the university to be more innovative and creative.

Nellis said that the university’s main goal is to be a top 10 university in the United States and one of the top 10 in the world. He also spoke about the need for the university to be more innovative and creative, especially in the areas of research and technology.