

Environmental Ethics

PHILO 595

What is the value of nature? Are we morally required to make the planet a nice place for future generations? If so, how should we go about doing so given our deep uncertainty about the planet's trajectory? In this course, we will ask these questions and others that arise in environmental ethics.