

Philosophy of Gender

PHILO 331

This course introduces students to recent philosophical work on the concept of gender, and surveys a variety of moral problems related to the ways in which gender structures our lives.

Possible topics include: gender identities, gendered language; gender and athletics; gender and education; gendered labor; adaptive preferences; feminist criticisms of political theory; intersectional feminism; and transnational feminist theory.

Dr. Amelia Hicks · Online · Asynchronous · Spring 2021