

Fall 2026

POLSC 675

Religion and Politics

Dr. John Warner

Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays

2:30-3:20 pm

You have probably heard it once in your life, about the two things you should never think bring up in a conversation: religion and politics. Almost never should you bring them up together. But why is it this way? This course takes a look into the vexed relationship between religion and politics focusing especially on religious intolerance, its historical emergence, theoretical significance, and ongoing relevance in modern Europe and the United States.

This course qualifies for a Primary Texts Certificate credit